

Non-profit Breastfeeding Center Holds Annual Fundraiser
Annual Night in the Garden supports Philadelphia area families

Abington, Pa. Sept. 9, 2019 –

A Night in the Garden, held at the Morris Arboretum, aims to raise funds for this local non-profit, which is there for all new families and babies during their challenges with breast and chestfeeding.

“The families and babies in our community rely on this funding source for breastfeeding and parenting support,” said Colette Acker, executive director.

The Breastfeeding Resource Center provides free support groups and a sliding scale payment for clients who are uninsured, or whose insurance doesn’t cover lactation consultations.

As the leader in breastfeeding and family support for the past 16 years in the Delaware Valley, the BRC expanded to King of Prussia and has added an expansive network of Community Counselors this year, to help support families past the first few lactation consultations.
